This book, The Science of Reincarnation, begins by proving reincarnation to you and explaining the migratory nature of your consciousness—what it is, where it goes, how it returns, and what it encounters along the way. This series of books is all science—what we see, what we know, and what we speculate may be.

Structurally, a science is made up of disciplines. What follows is a short list of some of the disciplines of this science of reincarnation and the university that originated each discipline: University of Virginia, children who remember prior lives; University of Nevada at Las Vegas, near-death experiences; University of Miami, past-life regression; University of Toronto, clairvoyant archeology; Remote Viewing Protocols; SRI (The Stanford Research Institute), The Intention Experiments, PEAR Labs (Princeton Engineering Anomalies Research Laboratories), the Monroe Institute, the gateway process; and the University of Edinburgh, the first chair of consciousness studies. Collectively, these and other disciplines comprise the science of reincarnation.

What makes this compelling is that the data points from one discipline support those of another discipline. For instance, what a child who remembers a prior incarnation might say about the time he was dead matches what someone who had a near-death experience might say about the time they were dead. The second book of this series, The Mathematics of the Science of Reincarnation, is mathematical proof that this is our reality.

This is proof of Planck's 1931 dictum that consciousness is fundamental and matter is derivative of consciousness. This means you were conscious before your current birth. He said, "I regard consciousness as fundamental. I regard matter as derivative from consciousness."¹

As this science coalesced from data points we could not explain in the various disciplines, something else was occurring. We learned how to visit that space, which is described in the third book in this series, The Applications of the Science of Reincarnation. Now we are no longer arguing about whether the math proves reincarnation; it does. We began navigating the space where people who have died can be communicated with. But around that narrow point is a universe teeming with similar intelligence.

To reach this point, we use the gateway process to induce hemi-sync, which synchronizes both hemispheres of your brain. Robert Monroe, a sound engineer, originated the process and founded the Monroe Institute. This process is like meditation.

As I explain the local galactic neighborhood, my reader will want verification and proof. I describe each of the following points in these three books. The legend is as follows. TSOR: The Science of Reincarnation; TMSOR: The Mathematics of the Science of Reincarnation; TASOR: The Applications of the Science of Reincarnation; then the page of the book, and then to the original sourcing in the footnotes, so the reader can reference more completely what I say here.

A 1983 CIA classified government document entitled Analysis and Assessment of the Gateway Process says, "Be intellectually prepared to react to possible encounters with intelligent, noncorporeal energy forms when time-space boundaries are exceeded."² (A full explanation is in TASOR 13–15.) That same process of consciousness raising explains how to reach heaven and your dead loved ones, but you are going to encounter aliens without bodies along the way. This is what the US government published in 1983, and it was not declassified until 2003. So, the American government agrees with what is being presented here in this regard. The science of reincarnation is about your consciousness—you. Where is it? It is not your body. You do not have the same body you had when you were six, yet you remember being six. You continually shed your body every few years. Just look at your pictures from twenty years ago. Your consciousness is moving from body to body as all your cells are replaced.

Death is defined as a flat line, the absence of a heartbeat. What is absent is the electrical energy that causes the heartbeat. That is, you, that energy. Religions that do not recognize this science call that energy your soul. For us in the science of reincarnation, that energy is you, and we study it, and major breakthroughs are being made.

That energy is made up of electrons when we drill down to the quantum level. Electrons have both a particle and a wave state. In the particulate state, you engage in three-dimensional activities; in the wave state, you engage in four-dimensional activities, such as dreaming or meditating. Remember, you are that energy, so both states are your natural environment. By syncing the left and right hemispheres of your brain (hemi-sync), you can induce this wave state so that you can enter the four-dimensional world at will.

Clairvoyance, remote viewing, intuition, and out-of-body experiences (OBEs) all rest on this understanding. We all have this psi ability. We are not alone in this 4D environment. We meet aliens there and people who have died. We can go looking for someone we knew in this life. We can visit the past and the future. Anything you see with an electromagnetic imprint here resides there.

When we use odds against chance calculations, the results point to certainty. An example is Hanan Monsour, who died and was reincarnated ten days later as Suzanne Ghanem. By the time she was two, she had mentioned the names of the children she had in her prior life, her husband Farouk, and her parents and brothers from that lifetime—thirteen names in all. After she met them, they accepted her as having lived as Hanan Monsour.⁴ (TMSOR chapter 4, “The Anomaly of Children Who Remember Prior Lives”).

There are many cases like this, and when taken collectively, they form fractal patterns, each an iteration of the event and evidence of their self-similarity. Repeated fractal patterns are evidence that this is our reality.

The science of reincarnation is not just about you but about us, all of us. Whatever we leave in terms of this planet, we return to. So, this is about both individual and societal reincarnation. That is why aliens are a part of the science of reincarnation. They are there in the four-dimensional afterlife, and they are here in our three-dimensional space now. Learning remote viewing opens the ability to see in that space for those who know the protocols. Anyone can do this.

Because you can now “see” or use that quantum state, you can now see the aliens around you. Remote viewing programs are now universally taught but little understood by the public. You can do this any time of day, anywhere you are, and you can look anywhere you want, not just in space but in time. The past and the future are both open to you. These alien groups around you begin to categorize themselves (TASOR 38–45). There are extraterrestrials, intraterrestrials, and transdimensionals. They do not like us looking at them; they have greater psi ability than we do, but we as a race are growing that ability. But they are looking at us through the same psi window. Sometimes they communicate with individuals.

You can find aliens on:

Mars: The Jet Propulsion Laboratory in California has pictures of the monuments on Mars that the public can request. JPL pictures show a pyramid and a face.⁵ We also have proof of a nuclear war on Mars 250,000 years ago. The proof comes from soil samples collected by the Mars rover, which revealed Zenon 149, an element that can only be created in a nuclear blast. We also know where that blast was and how large it was.

Earth: In the early years of the Eisenhower administration, Eisenhower met with several groups of ETs and reached an agreement with one group, which now has basing rights at Area 51. This is in exchange for technology.

Alluding to a treaty signed by the Eisenhower administration, Col. Phillip Corso, a highly decorated officer who served on Eisenhower’s National Security Council, wrote: “We had negotiated a kind of surrender with them as long as we couldn’t fight them. They dictated the terms because they knew what we most feared was disclosure.”⁶

The Grays are an alien species that have repeatedly appeared in the alien narrative.

Dr. John Mack, in his evaluation of patients exhibiting symptoms of ET abduction, claims that many of these communicated through telepathy with the Grays. In reports on the content of the telepathic communication with the Grays, abductees/contactees have reported that the Grays' survival as a species is threatened due to genetic degradation because of the repeated use of cloning for reproductive purposes.

The Grays say they need to create a hybrid race that integrates the human and Gray genes for the continuation of their species. It is claimed that with the creation of this hybrid race, the Grays will somehow be able to transfer their "essence" or "consciousness" as individuals into the hybrid, thereby perpetuating the continuation of their race.⁷

This is an example of the migratory nature of their consciousness into another body, in effect reincarnating into that new body. This is a fractal of what we are seeing in humans, and the math is proving that humanity is experiencing the same movement of our consciousness into new bodies.

Rather than argue over what constitutes proof, let us show you how aliens are communicating with humans right now, outside government channels. In 1974, Frank Drake and Carl Sagan sent the Arecibo message, using the Arecibo Radio Telescope in Puerto Rico (TASOR 144–145). They aimed the transmission at M13, a globular cluster of stars.

In 2001, we received the Arecibo answer, duplicating our message in the form of what would be called a crop circle (TASOR 244). This was quickly labeled as a hoax, the misinformation architect being the CIA. But crop circles continued to appear and were still labeled as hoaxes. Yet there were differences between the fake crop circles and the real ones, and real researchers came to understand the rhythm of real crop circle creation and were hard at work understanding their meaning.

Thirty to forty real crop circles appear each year. I am going to refer to the two crop circles that appeared on July 13, 2011, one on Chaddenwick Hill and one on Avebury Trusloe.⁸

They depict a magnetar, a type of neutron star that emits gamma-ray bursts. These crop circles appeared to show a gamma-ray burst (TASOR 249, see the pictures). The magnetar burst was observed on Earth on July 14, 2011. To state it clearly, the crop circle of the magnetar burst appeared one day before the magnetar burst. No one on earth could have known it was about to occur. This is disclosure, not from our government but from the aliens themselves.

The crop circle that appeared on Roundway Hill on July 23, 2011, depicts the chemical structure of melatonin. The crop circle on May 29, 2020, was a reiteration of the COVID-19 virus, depicting discoveries made later.⁹ They are communicating outside government channels, in a way we can all see.

There is video evidence of how a crop circle is made. It is made by a point of light that is dedicated to creating the message it wishes to convey. It flies over the wheat field, bending the crops.¹⁰ The only known “real” footage recording of a crop circle, including visible UFOs from 1996, was filmed by John Wheyleigh. The recording was taken near the ancient hill fort of Oliver’s Castle, near Devizes, Wiltshire. While having an out-of-body experience, Robert Monroe visited a friend he called RW. The next day, she called him and asked what he had been doing the night before. He asked her why, and she said, “I was sitting in the living room after supper, reading the newspaper. Something made me look up, and there on the other side of the room was something hanging and waving in the air.”

Monroe asked her what it looked like.

“It was like a filmy piece of gray chiffon,” she said. “I could see the wall and chair behind it, and it started to come toward me. I was frightened, and I thought it might be you.”¹¹

The implication is that we could project our own message onto their crops using this projection method as well.

While others may paint this landscape with suspicion, the proof is abundant. However, established organizations, such as religions and governments, that would be adversely affected by a change to the collective agreement, resist the spread of this emerging structure because it challenges their power structures. They want to prevent the distribution of this information to the point of cover-up. They want the collective agreement not to be changed.

So, what is the collective agreement?

The collective agreement is what you and your peers have been taught, and you tacitly agree to. For instance, if you are religious, you might believe in angels, never considering that they might be alien lifeforms influencing human development. You are told the Hebrew calendar is 5,700 years old and the Christian calendar is 2,000 years old. You never stop to consider the abundant evidence that this planet was inhabited by alien life forms thirty-five thousand years ago, which is part of the geologic record. Where did they go? They are still here. That information would break the collective agreement.

So, we must reeducate ourselves and incorporate new knowledge, as what you were taught was wrong. The information in these books is more correct; it is an update. Your belief system must incorporate this new knowledge. We are all in a constant process of uploading new information as our new reality unfolds.

But this new information should change our collective agreement and, in turn, our actions toward one another. Seeing this new collective agreement reveals the alien forms all around us, our own continued consciousness, and how we collectively communicate with the aliens. We then must assess what we want the world to look like when we return. The study of reincarnation is to remake ourselves and the world around us.

The new perspective changes our collective agreement; war is now useless as our vision shifts outward. To fight among ourselves is to act like petulant children in front of races more advanced than our own. War must now end as this science propagates globally. We must deal with our new interstellar neighbors. The white right and other global fundamentalist groups must realize that the rest of humanity is an asset to protect itself, as it alone is weaker than all of us together.

Earth is not ours, as others live here; it is not theirs either. It is ours collectively and needs to be protected, and our collective DNA is our collective asset.

In this model of the science of reincarnation, we are at a generational and societal inflection point; it is rife with both danger and opportunity for all of us, including the aliens.

The next generation will accept this model as their collective agreement, and trade and cultural agreements with alien societies will no longer be the clandestine work of governments but rather a step forward in human development.

The question we should all ask is, if reincarnation is real, as these examples prove, then how can we return to a better earth—one that is not at war with itself and is healthy in heart and environment?

This science should change the collective agreement by stopping war, famine, slavery, and discrimination. We need the collective courage to endorse the science as it is. We need to empower everyone so humanity has better, more substantial resources to face our galactic neighbors.

There are multiple ways this impacts self-government, from the military to investment banking to religious leaders. Planetary wealth and health can be managed through this program for all.

One example is to teach this, speak this truth, and become powerful. It starts with the scientists who can see human noncorporeal consciousness and are trying to understand it—the consciousness researchers.

But how? Political positions based on science.

If consciousness is fundamental and matter is derivative of consciousness, and the continuity of consciousness is now essentially proven, then that validates the science of reincarnation and validates transgender men and women. The empirical evidence is clear in the cases of transgender children in the UVA studies on children who remember prior lives, and in the cases at the University of Miami on past life regression. The intent to establish gender begins in the 4th dimension. Physicists should support transgender men and women politically because that is our reality. Allowing J. K. Rowling to go unchallenged is a failure of our global physicist community. The physicists should not just support this; they should be vocal about it. This is one example among many.

But organizing the many examples we could post underlies the need to organize ourselves. The consciousness community should seriously consider organizing itself so there is a separate organization to propagate this information, as proposed in The Applications of the Science of Reincarnation and in the creation of TIFACS (www.tifacs.org), The Institute for Advanced Consciousness Studies. Its mandate is to educate and investigate. To ensure our positions are clear, we need to educate. So, an organization outside the consciousness center would need to be tasked with this, advising our leaders on threats and opportunities as we investigate our new place in the universe. Within TIFACS would be an exopolitical advisory board for our leaders to reference. In short, a global exopolitical think tank.

Politicians and bankers must see that a healthy Earth is a more productive trading partner for galactic export. This is a consequence of a greater understanding of our place in the galactic neighborhood. Funding should be easier to obtain now that a clear explanation of the emerging situation is unfolding. It should also strategize opening relations with Exo groups that may be mutually beneficial. In short, exo trade possibilities.

If you build it, they will come. The aliens are already here, and do not have a global organization to connect with. TIFACS would have the best understanding, the most qualified scientists, and the best resources to address the alien 4th dimension issue and will become a global resource for governments, businesses, and society.

Aliens also have as much responsibility as we do and should be involved in the public discussion about our new reality. This leads to dealing with an exopolitical reality, where we need a foreign policy to address various alien groups in both three and four dimensions to advise our leaders.

Collectively, this is a new incarnation for humanity, which is why this is The Science of Reincarnation.
